

Going to the Shops

Three scarecrows live on Hafod Farm - Byrti, and Beti and Ben.

Byrti stands in the field every day frightening the crows.

It's cold and windy in the field, but Byrti wears a coat, cap, scarf, gloves and shoes. He is warm and happy.

Beti stands in the field every day frightening the crows.

It's cold and windy in the field, but Beti wears a coat, scarf, gloves and shoes.

She is warm and happy.

Ben stands in the field every day frightening the crows.

It's cold and windy in the field, but Ben is wearing a T-shirt, shorts and sandals. Oh pity! It's cold and boring.

One day, Ben walks across the field, through the gate and down to the village.

He goes shopping - goes shopping for warm clothes.

It's a clothes shop.

There are all kinds of clothes in the shop - colourful, warm clothes.

The store has coats of all colours, caps of all colours, scarves of all colours, gloves of all colours and shoes of all colours.

Ben asks Mrs. Evans for a coat, cap, scarf, gloves and shoes.

"Can I have a coat, cap, scarf, gloves and shoes please," said Ben.

Mrs. Evans packs the clothes in a parcel for Ben.

"Thank you, Mrs. Evans," said Ben.

Does Ben want something else?

Yes - but what do you think it is?

Ben goes home to Hafod Farm.

He carries two parcels - one large and one small.

He's very smart and very warm - but what's in the small parcel,

Ben?

Glasses! Oh Ben!!!
